THEIR GENERAL CHARACTERISTICS.

ALL his earliest American ancestors were of English descent. They fled from the land of their fathers to escape the indignities, the ostracism, the fines, the imprisonments and the executions, to which the Puritans were subjected by the Established Church of England. They came to this then inhospitable wilderness, filled with savages, "for freedom to worship God." They came here to enjoy the rights of conscience. They came here to establish "a Church without a bishop, and a State without a king." In England, they were all Non-Conformists; in this country, they have all been Congregationalists. They were a part of the Puritans of Massachusetts Bay, and not of the Pilgrims of Plymouth. They arrived here about the same time, or between the years 1630 and 1636, and, after brief residences in Boston, Dorchester, Charlestown and elsewhere, they clustered together in Northampton, Mass. That town—perhaps the most beautiful town in New England—was the first real home in America of the Clarks, the Lymans, the Strongs and the Kingsleys. There they intermarried, and, though there have been large expansions elsewhere from that original stock and that ancestral home, the several lines have maintained a singularly close affinity down to the present day—a period of nearly two hundred and fifty years. Most if not all of the earliest settlers, and of several generations of their descendants, were members of the Church, and very many of them were eminent for their piety. Their piety was not of that merely formal character which is heartless and therefore worse than useless, but it was cordial, sincere and saving. In a very eminent sense, they “walked with God,” and their memories are fragrant with the aroma of heaven. Fifty years ago there were more than ninety members in the Congregational Church at Northampton by the name of Clark. From the time of Stoddard down to this present writing, with but two short intervals, there has always been one deacon in that church by the name of Clark; and sometimes there have been two, and sometimes three, simultaneously, by that name. The following is a tabular view of their names, the dates of their election and of their deaths, and their ages:

Names.	Appointed.	Died.	Age.

All the families of his ancestors have been the decided friends of education, of social order and of liberty regulated by law. They have been loyal to their country, and patriotic in its defence. They have generally belonged to the middle class of society—the most substantial and the most reliable class—and as DeFoe said of the Scotch, they have been

“Rich compared to poor, and poor compared to rich.”

Their names may not appear in the registers of heralds ; they were only anxious that they may be found in the “Book of Life.” They were of more noble blood than “all the blood of all the Howards,” for their “patents of nobility” date long before the Conquest, and their “coats of arms” are emblematic of whole generations that have “fought a good fight and have finished their course.”

“My boast is not that I deduce my birth
From loins enthroned, and rulers of the earth ;
But higher far my proud pretensions rise—
The soar of parents passed into the skies ”

1.—HIS ANCESTRY ON HIS FATHER'S SIDE.

His first American ancestor by the name of Clark was Lieut. William Clark. He, and his wife Sarah, were members of the church in Dorchester, Mass., as early as the year 1637. In 1659, five years after the settlement of Northampton, Mass., they removed to that town. He died July 18 (N. S.), 1690, aged 81 years. She died Sept. 6, 1675, and he married for his second wife, Sarah Cooper, of Springfield, Mass.

Of the six sons and five daughters of this very remarkable family—remarkable alike for their longevity, their piety and their numerous offspring—four of them lived to be more than 90 years of age; three others were more than 80, and three others were more than 70. All the sons were married, and all the daughters except one. All the sons lived with their wives more than 50 years, and could therefore have celebrated their “Golden Weddings,” if that had been the custom of those times. All the sons outlived their wives, and all the daughters outlived their husbands. There were two deacons in the family, and the tradition is that these six brothers and their sisters were accustomed, for many years, to meet every week in their own houses, by rotation, for special and earnest prayer that “their children and their children’s children, down to the latest generation, might be converted and saved.” The influence of their humble and believing supplications to a covenant-keeping God is doubtless felt in the families of their numerous descendants to-day, and will be through all time. It has long been a tradition in Northampton and its vicinity, that “Increase Clark, with his hands tied behind him, would out-pray Mr. Edwards.”

2—HIS ANCESTRY ON HIS MOTHER'S SIDE.

His first American ancestor by the name of Lyman was Richard Lyman, who was born in 1580, in High Ongar, County of Essex, England, about 35 miles east by south from London. He was baptized Oct. 30th, of that year. He married, date unknown, Sarah Osborne, daughter of Richard Osborne, of Halstead, in Kent. They emigrated with their children to New England, in 1631. Martha Winthrop, the third wife of John Winthrop, and John Eliot, the celebrated apostle to the Indians, came over in the same ship. He first settled in Charlestown, Mass., and with his wife united with the church in Roxbury, under the pastoral care of Eliot. On the 15th of October, 1635, he took his departure, with a party of about one hundred persons, through the wilderness from Massachusetts to Connecticut, a journey of two weeks' duration, and became one of the founders of Hartford, Conn. The Rev. Thomas Hooker and family were among the emigrants. Mrs. Hooker, being an invalid, was carried through the woods the entire distance on a litter. Mr. Hooker was soon made the pastor of the First Church in Hartford, and there is every probability that Richard Lyman and his wife were among the earliest members.

The house of John Lyman caught fire, and his two daughters, Abigail and Hannah, were burned in it near midnight, Dec. 8, 1747. The principal reason why so many of these families removed from

II. - - - His Writings.

In October, 1827, he published, by request, a Discourse upon the "True Foundation of Christian Hope," delivered at the ordination of his brother, the Rev. Tertius S. Clarke, as pastor of the Congregational Church in South Deerfield, Mass. In 1836, he published a volume of eight "Lectures to Young People," of which two editions were printed, one in Boston and one in New York. In 1838, he published four "Letters to the Hon. Horace Mann, Secretary of the Board of Education," then recently formed, upon the proper functions of that Board. The letters were published over the signature, "Clericus Hampdenensis." In 1839, he published a "Sermon upon the death of William L. Wyman, of Brookline, Vt.," who was drowned in the Chicopee River. In 1841, he removed to Boston, and became joint editor and proprietor of "The New England Puritan," and afterward was proprietor and editor of "The Christian Alliance and Family Visiter," of "The Christian Times;" and at a later period still, was the Boston editor of "The Christian Parlor Magazine" and "Merry's Museum," published in New York. His contributions to these publications were numerous. In 1854, he published an octavo volume of 235 pages, entitled "Fugitives from the Escritoire of a Retired Editor," consisting of articles, some of which had never been published, and others which had already appeared in reviews or in pamphlet form. In 1866, as chairman of a committee appointed for the purpose, he compiled and edited a small volume of 85 pages, entitled "A Memorial of the Re-union of the Natives of Westhampton, Mass." In 1869, his "Oneness of the Christian Church," a volume of 105 pages, made its appearance, and it has passed through two editions. In 1871, his work entitled "Orthodox Congregationalism and the Sects," a volume of 170 pages, was published. In 1872, he published in the Vermont Chronicle, in six articles, a "Review of the Oberlin Council," over the signature, "A New England Congregationalist." In 1874, he published a volume on "The Revision of the English Version of the Bible." It was adopted and issued by the American Tract Society, Boston. In 1875, "The Life and Writings of F. P. G. Guizot"—an article which he had read before "The New England Historic Genealogical Society," in the course of his official duty as the Historiographer of that Institution—was given to the public. In the course of a service of seven years in that capacity, he prepared and read 127 Memoirs of the deceased members of that Society, the greater part of which have been published in "The New England Historical and Genealogical Register." In 1875, he also wrote a "Memoir of the Rev. James Browning Miles, D.D., Corresponding Secretary of the American Peace Society, which was published in "The Advocate of Peace," in December of that year. In 1876, he published in the Boston Transcript, over the signature of "Justice," a Review of the "Advisory Council" then recently held in Brooklyn, N. Y.

The preparation of this Autobiographical Sketch on this centennial anniversary of American independence, and in the eightieth year of the author's life, has served to beguile some of the hours of a great domestic sorrow, and he hopes it may be of interest to those who will come after him. The fact that he descended from ancestors, who were so clearly among the favorites of heaven, fills him with unspeakable joy; and he leaves this record in the hands of his children and his childrens' children, with the earnest hope and prayer, that they too, by the renewing grace of God, may follow in the footsteps of such a worthy ancestry, and like them be prepared to "enter in through the gates into the city." "They that be wise shall shine as the brightness of the firmament, and they that turn many to righteousness as the stars forever and ever."
